

Political Factors in the Scarcity of Shia Population in Al-Andalus

Dr. Majid Abbasi<sup>1</sup>

Abstract

---

At the same time or shortly after conquest of Al-Andalus by the Muslims, religion of Shiite entered in this land. But several factors prevent the spread of Shiite and caused the failure of the religion in Al-Andalus. The political situations were one of the most important factors. So, the main question is that what are the most important political factors caused the failure of spread of Shiite in Al-Andalus? In response to this question the hypotheses is that "Political factors such as uprising attributed to Shiites and rival Umayyad in Andalus and conflict with Fatimid and Edrissian governments, caused the failure of spread Shiites thought." This research will focus exclusively on political factors, by use of documents and historical books with descriptive method examines the hypothesis.

---

Keywords: Al-Andalus, Political factors, Uprising, Shiite, Fatimid, Edrissian.

Introduction

Al-Andalus region as the most western Muslim lands was attractive to all groups and Islamic sects. Therefore, Shiites attempted to influence and spread their ideas among the inhabitants of Al-Andalus. Some of these efforts have emerged in the uprising. For example, uprising of "Shaghia Ben Abdolvahed Moknasi" against "Abdolrahman Omavi" (755-788) continued from 768 to 777 and created many problems for the Umayyad king of Al-Andalus. This movement finally was suppressed by the assassination of "Moknasi". (Abdolrahman, 1989 :101)

The widespread presence of Alevism and Ahlul Bayt advocacy groups in some cities, indicates activity from the Shiites to enter politics in Al-Andalus. Due to the presence of Alevism families, they had certain areas in some cities. Their houses were known Al-Hashimi. The name derives from the name of a descendant of "Imam Jafar Sadeh" Named "Hashem Ben Ebrahim Ben Jafar" who went to Al-Andalus and lived in "Lobleh" area. (Azari, 1983 :56-57)

Shiites for presence and influence in Al-Andalus were faced with many obstacles and problems. They achieved some success in some times. But these successes incomparable with eastern lands such as Iraq and Iran. The failure of Shiites in Al-Andalus has several factors. In this research only we review the political reasons of this issue. In this regard, Michael Stanford writes: "When asked the cause or causes, usually no need for complete list of all involves causes. we studied only the cause that is important and benefit for us." (Stanford, 2005 : 319)

So, the main question is that what are the most important political factors caused the failure of spread of Shiite in Al-Andalus? In response to this question the hypotheses is that "Political factors such as uprising attributed to Shiites and rival Umayyad in Al-Andalus and conflict with Fatimid and Edrissian governments, caused the failure of spread Shiites thought."

1-Shiite Uprisings

Al-Andalus was conquered by the Umayyads. The inhabitants of the land were familiar with Islam by the Umayyads. Due to long-standing hostility with the Shia and Alevis, the Umayyads did a lot of anti-Shia propaganda in Al-Andalus. The establishment of the Umayyads in Al-Andalus intensified the hostility. In fact, the formation of the rule of the Umayyads in Al-Andalus, created obstacles against the spread of Shiite ideology in this region.

---

<sup>1</sup>Associate Professor of International Relations, Allameh Tabataba'i University. Email: dr.majidabbasi@gmail.com

The fall of the Umayyads in the East and the massacres and suppression by the Abbasids, Caused hostility of the Umayyads with them. Especially given that Abdul Rahman(755-788), the founder of the Umayyad rule in Al-Andalus, after a lot of hard work and suffering that could revive the Umayyad rule in this land, faced with uprisings that some of them were related to Alawites and Shiites. The uprising connection with Alawites and Shiites and according to the history of their enemies, the Umayyad rulers tried to suppress the uprising and fight the Shia. One of the first movements of Shiite could be observed by "Abdullah bin Saad bin Ammar bin Yasir"(760) Who commanded Yemeni in the fight against Abdul Rahman. Their fight was like the confrontation of "Ammar Yasir" and "Moavieh" in the Battle of Siffin(658). Finally, "Abdullah bin Saad" was defeated and killed in 761.( Ibn al-Qūṭīya,1996 :52-53)

One of the other uprisings against Abdul Rahman was formed by "Alae Ben Moghith Jozami"(763). He was supported by the Abbasid Caliph "Al-Mansur", (753-774) but he was defeated. (Ibid : 55) The uprising was not supported by Shiites, however since the Alawites were united by the Abbasids and their activities were against Umayyads in the Levant, Caused the Umayyad limited Shiites in Al-Andalus.

Another uprising, in which Shiites are involved, was conducted in the year of 774 by someone called Hussein bin Yahya. His grandfather was Shia and one of the commanders of "Imam Ali". A large number of barbarians opposed the Umayyads, joined him. but the uprising was defeated and he was killed.(Ibn Hozm, 1995 :64)

Another Shiite uprising was conducted by "Shaghia Abdul Wahid Meknesi". The uprising was a great danger for the government of "Abdul Rahman" and continued from 768 to 776. He claimed that he is Fatemi. Shaghia's uprising was a great danger for Abdul Rahman. He could not defeat Shaghia, therefore, assassinated him, and ended to this crisis. (Ibid :131)

It seems that the Umayyads with three reasons suppressed Shiite thought and prevented its spread:

- 1- The uprising that was done by Alawites
- 2- The uprising that was done by Shia
- 3- The danger by the neighboring Shiite government which threatened them.

2-Combat with influence of peripheral Shiite governments

Attempt to confront with Shiite governments and their competitors in the borders was another important factor of the Umayyads in opposition to the Shiites. Undoubtedly the establishment of two Alawite's governments in North Africa and their neighborhood with Al-Andalus, Edrissian (788) and then Fatimid (910) and their efforts to influence in Al-Andalus had great impact on enemies and confronted the Umayyad with Shiite culture and thought. The establishment of the Alawite governments and advertisement of Shia near the territory of the Umayyad, leads to political confrontation with the Alawite governments and the Umayyad. So, they have to cope with the beliefs of each other. They insulted to predecessors of each other. Edrissian government formation in the Maghreb (Morocco), stimulated the Umayyad government to cope with them. Edrissian did not have the ability to cope with the Umayyad of Al-Andalus. But the Umayyad considered them as a threat. Umayyad activities against Edrissian, indicated this point. Eventually, weak governance of Edrissian was overthrown by the Umayyads. (Khatib, 1964 : 220-222)

At the end of the third century AH in North Africa, other political transformation was formed. This issue was the foundation of Fatimid state in 910, on the basis of Shiite ideas. They had claimed leadership of the Islamic world. In contrast of Fatimid government not only the Umayyad Andalusian, but also Abbasid caliphate was also felt threatened. After the Fatimids fixed their power in the Arabian West, started to develop influence and territory in the East and the West. They also began to develop their thoughts in the land of Al-Andalus. Umayyads to confront this danger, suppressed all groups tended to Shia. Even Abdul Nasser Umayyads (912-962) to cope with Fatimids government called himself Amir Al-Momenin (Commander of the Faithful). He ordered that all religious meetings in Andalus, cursed Shiites. (Ibn Saeed, 1996 :182)

During this period, Anti-Shia and Alawites supported. Many writers and poets with the aim of achieving the interests of the Umayyad palace, wrote articles and poems against Shias. For example, Abd al-Malik ibn Habib to be happy the Umayyads in his poetry, stimulated them to celebrate the day of Ashura. (Moghri, 1988 :6) Also, Ibn Abdol Rabeih mentioned in the poem "Mu'awiya" as the fourth caliph. He has no mention of "Ali ibn Abi Talib". This poem was the harsh response of the Fatimids. (Zarkali, 1989 :207)

3-Combat with Shia political thoughts

One of the important reasons that prevent the spread of Shi'ite thoughts in Al-Andalus, was the official religion of "Maliki" by supported of the Umayyads in Al-Andalus. "Maliki" religion with the support of Abdul Rahman (755-782) entered to Al-Andalus. His son "Hisham" (788-796) forced the people to act on the basis of Maliki religion. He ordered, judgments and political issues made on the basis of Maliki. (Ghazi Ayaz, 1965 :155)

Maliki jurists had an important role in the politics and government of Al-Andalus. For example, "Yahya ben Yahya Leisi" known as "the wise of Al-Andalus", have an important position in the Umayyad government. Ibn Rabeah Says: "Rulers and people accepted his opinion on political issues." (Alzahbi, 1992: 416)

In fact, the alliance was formed between Maliki jurists and the Umayyad. Maliki jurists gave political and religious legitimacy to government and Umayyad supported them. Maliki jurists, accused Shia to deviation of Islam. For example, "Ibn Sahl Alandalusi" divided Shiites into two groups and writes: "A group of radical Shia knows "Ali" like God or the Prophet, they could be excommunicated. Another Shia group knows "Ali" as Imam (leader of all Muslims) and consider the position for his children. They know that obedience to Ali is like obedience to God. They are in error." (Ibn Sahl, 1981 :18)

Umayyads succeeded in prevent the spread of Shia thought. Poets and scientists to win the support of Umayyad using the wrong words against Shiites. for instance "Ibn Rabbeh", denies Caliphate of "Ali", and presented "Mu'awiya" as the fourth caliph. Also, "Abbas Ibn Naseh" to consent of Umayyad ruler Abd-Alrahman, considers him as the heir of justice after the Prophet Muhammad and Othman. (Ibn Bar, 1997 :193)

Conclusion

The early years of the arrival of Muslims in Al-Andalus, Shi'ite thoughts penetrated in this land. But faced with various obstacles and could not expand. The conquest of Al-Andalus by the Umayyad and their domination on the region, caused expand of anti-Alevi policies in this land. Uprisings tendencies to Alawites or some signs of Shi'ite thought, at the time of the formation of Umayyad rule. Also the formation of Shi'ite governments (Edrissian and Fatimid) near the borders of Al-Andalus, was the reason that the Umayyad cope with Shiites. As well, entrance of Maliki religious ideas and its connections with Umayyad rule, prevented the spread of the ideas of all non-Maliki Islamic sects, especially Shiites. With a lot of limitations for the Shiites, and prevention of their Religious ceremonies and freedoms, they were forced to emigrate, so their population has decreased in Al-Andalus. Therefore, Political factors, has an effective role in preventing the spread of Shiites ideas and beliefs and Scarcity of Shia Population.

References

- Abolrahman, Hasan(1989), Conquest of Andalus news, second edition, Beirut : Darol-ketab.
- Alzahbi, Shamsoddin (1992) The history of Islamic famous, Beirut: Darolmaktabalarabi.
- Azari, Ahmad Ben Mohammad(1983) Al-Andalus expression in the west world, third edition, Beirut :Darolseghafe.
- Ghazi Ayaz, Abolfazl (1965) Order perceptions and approximation routes, to know the Maliki Religion, Beirut:Darolmaktab.
- Ibn al-Qūṭīya, Abobakr(1996) The history of Andalusia Conquest, Translator: Reza Sheikhi, second edition, Mashhad: AstanQods Publications.
- Ibn Hozm(1995) The Arab population influx, fifth edition, Cairo :Encyclopedia.
- Ibn Khatib (1964) The history of Arab Maghreb in the Middle Ages, Translator: Ahmad Mokhtar Abadi and Ebrahim Alketani, Publisher; Darolketab.
- Ibn Saeed Almaghrebi(1996) Costume Morocco in Morocco, fourth edition, Cairo: DarolMaaref.
- Ibn Bar (1997) Beginning and the end, Beirut :DarolKotob
- Ibn Sahl, Andulosi(1981) Religious groups in Andalusia, Cairo: Arabic center for International Media.
- Moghri, Ahmad ibn Mohammad (1988) Al-Andalus: According of its minister Ibn al-Khatib, Beirut: Dar Sader.
- Stanford, Michael (2005) Introduction to historical research, Translator: Masoud Sadeghi, second edition, Tehran: Samt Publications.
- Zarkali, Kheirodin(1989) Alaalam, Eighth edition : Beirut: Darol Elm.